The UNC Community Clinic Offers

- Psychotherapy with children, adolescents, families, parenting groups; school consultation.

- Educational assessment for learning disabilities for children and college students, giftedness placement and early admission to kindergarten.

- Diagnostic assessment to help determine appropriate courses of treatment, including state-of-the-art assessment techniques for childhood Depression, Bipolar Disorder, Anxiety, and ADHD in children and adults.

Affordable Pricing
We offer psychotherapy to children, adolescents, and families at reduced rates, also adjusted based on household income.

- This is possible because the UNC Psychology Department Community Clinic is a training clinic for advanced doctoral (Ph.D.) students in clinical psychology at UNC. Additionally, there is limited availability for licensed psychologists to conduct assessments.

- Student therapists use evidence-based assessment and treatment and are supervised by nationally renowned and NC-licensed psychologists serving on the faculty in the UNC Department of Psychology.

- All clients undergo a thorough phone screening to determine appropriateness for our clinic and for the best possible care.

- The Clinic accepts individuals from the community at large - as well as UNC students, faculty and staff.

"I didn’t know where I could go."

Working with Insurance
Although our clinic does not deal directly with insurance companies, we are able to provide documentation of service provided so that if covered, your insurance company may reimburse you for any out-of-pocket payments you have incurred.

Hours & Appointments
We offer flexible daytime and evening hours.
